General Information

Autism Today (AT) provides access to space, at a cost, to approved exhibitors at its 2007 Edmonton Conference. Acceptance of an exhibit is in no way to be construed or promoted as an endorsement by Autism Today. As an organization Autism Today encourages its members to fully investigate all possible treatment and support options prior to selecting those they feel most appropriate to their personal situation. Therefore, recognizing the diversity of choices the membership of the Autism Today may make, AT reserves the right to review each Exhibitor's exhibit, distribution materials (if applicable) and presentation materials for possible conflict with this policy of informed consumer choice. Exhibits, ads and materials may also be reviewed for variance from their initial description, poor taste, or possible disruption to the conference due to noise, method of operation, material or other possible distractions from the character of the conference. If such is found to be the case, the Exhibitor shall restrict its exhibit as requested or forfeit its exhibit space and immediately dismantle and remove all materials and vacate the exhibit space when requested to do so by an authorized representative of AT and other materials may be disallowed. If the Exhibitor refuses to dismantle and remove all materials and vacate the exhibit space, AT may have all materials dismantled and removed from the exhibit space. If the Exhibitor refuses to take immediate possession of any materials removed from the exhibit space, AT may dispose of the materials without liability to Exhibitor.

AT reserves the right to make final booth assignments and will make every effort to assign one of the exhibitor's choices of exhibit space taking into consideration space requirements and competitors. Space assignments will be made on a first-come, first-served basis. AT reserves the right to make the final determination of all space assignments in the best interest of the Congress. The utilization of exhibitor's booth space may not exceed 10 ft in height.
